WILL PROVE LIVE PAPER

Special T. P. A. Edition of The Times-Dispatch Booming.

ADS ARE NOW ROLLING IN

Nearly a Hundred and Fifty Contracts Have Already Been Secured, and a List of Those Who Will Advertise.

The "Special T. P. A. Edition" of The Times-Dispatch, to be published on May 5th, will undoubtedly be a paper full of live and interesting T. P. A. news. Letters and special articles for publication are being received at headquarters daily, and the blue pencil in the hands of the news editor will have to be wielded strenuously in order to find place for the large amount of matter that is being sent

One of the most interesting and valuable contributions to the paper is being prepared by Colonel John S. Harwood, the chairman of the National Legislative Committee.

This article will deal in detail with the great work accomplished by the Travelers' Protective Association in connection with the passage of the bill creating the new the passage of the bill creating the new Department of Commerce and Labor. Hon. George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, has premised to write a letter for publication in the "Special T. P. A. Edition." The different posts in the State have each appointed special committees to makage their departments of the paper, and Assistant, Business Manager Smith will make a tour of the State next week to confer and co-operate with these committees.

vertising Manager H. Lee Lorraine

Advertising Manager H. Lee Lorralno reports a very active canvass of the city, and is being helped by a large committee of the T. P. A. members, who are systematically securing advertising contracts for the "Special Edition."

Mr. Lorraine has sent out thousands of letters and circulars to the business houses in this city and in other cities, asking their full co-operation with the T. P. A. in this, their unique journalistic enterprise.

NEW YORK April 15.—Two hundred colored business and professional men attended a dinner given in honor of Booker T. Washington at Carnestle Hall to-night. Appropriate was made of the founding of two scholarships in the Tuskeger Institute. In an address Booker Washington said in part;

We must settle down to the idea of taking a long fundamental and philosophical view of the conditions that surround that we was to the conditions that surround the conditions the conditions that surround the conditions that

us. We must not become too much discouraged by the temporary and local conditions. In the long run any race that proves itself worthy will suiceed. I am more concerned about our minimal, tangible, visible progress than I am about adverse criticismy. "Bach one should help forward friendly, sympathetic relations betyden the two races. This can be done not in a grovering manner, but in a manly way, straightforward, honest way. It requires little rounage or statemanship for a man in New York or Boston to tell, the colored people what they should do, in the way of exhibiting courage in the Spith. Sometimes it requires more courage to keep times it requires more courage to keep slient or refrain from action than it does to speak or act."

Country Mills and Corn Bread. Editor of The Times-Disputch:

Sir,-In your Saturday morning's issue you have an editorial under the caption, "The Corn Meal Cook," in which you state that you are of the opinion that the state that you are of the opinion that the consumption of corn meal bread is decreasing. Our experience in the corn milling business indicates that the contrary is true, as we, togother with other Virginia mills, have largely increased our capacity. You may not be aware of the fact that we have three mills operated by water power, grinding corn meal, with a total capacity of 4,500 bushels chally. The very small country mills are gradually passing away, as they are mable to compute with the larger mills. The process of manufacture in the present water-ground corn meal in Virginia is the same as the old fashioned country mill, all of us using very large mill stones, which grind slowly, and produce a soft fiet meal. The Northern and Western millers do not use mill stones in making their corn meal, but use instead fron rollers, such as were used in our modern ficur mills, which produce a round, sharp granular meal, which is not liked by the Southern people.

To show the peculiarities in tasts of different sections of this country, we would say that north of the Makon's and Dixon's line, the corn meal consumed is made principally from yellow corn ground on rilers, whereas south of the same line the meal is made from white corn ground on mill stones. The Northern meal being so granular and the Southern meal so soft, the two would compare about as granulated sugar with pulverized sugar.

We note in particular your remarks that Europeans do, not like corn meal as table food. Several years ago very little if any corn meal was used for human food in Europe, but since Colonel Murphy, of the Agricultural Department at Washington, went to Germany to introduce American corn, we believe there has been a small consumption of corn meal in the German Empire. The American millers are unable to obtain this tusiness, owing to the very high tariff the Germans have placed upon innoved corn meal in the removed. American corn millers a monopoly of the market. If this tariff could be removed, American corn millers could enter that market, and no doubt work up a large business. We are finding a large business in corn meal opening up in British South Affica; as the Kaffir corn raised by the Boers is very similar to American corn, and since the country has been devastated by the army, there have been large importations of American corn meal, just se coon as Europe can be educated to the use of corn meal. It is a very cheap and nutritious food, and we believe that in the mext twenty-tive years, we shall have a largely increased demand for it throughout Europe.

Very truly yours,

An Appeal to the Voters of King William

Editor of The Times-Dispatch: Sir,-Since the passage of the Mann oill the liquor sellers and their advocates have been working to obtain signatures for the licensing of the saloon. In view of the fact that names are often signed carclessly and .without due thought helng given to the matters at issue, I would nak the men of King William, wielding the responsible power of the franchise, to pause and consider the results to the community which invariably follow the saleon. Heretofore the responsibility of the country saleon has rested on the law courts, but recent legislation places the responsibility now on the individual voter. Then the saleon keeper had to bear the brunt of the public condemnation and odium attached to the saleon, but now he will be able to say, all this that happens is because the voters prayed the courts for it—they demanded the saleon. Voters, when the pitiful, emaclated, ill-red, ill-clothed family of the drunkard is in your midst, and the ories of his cruelly beaten wife is heard on the night alr—when profanity, ilcentiousness, drunken brawls and vice invade decent living—when our youths are debauched, homes wrecked and the door thrown wide for theft, musder and grim-visaged orime in ing given to the matters at issue, I would theft, muder and grim-visaged crime in when our youths are debauched, homes wrecked and the door thrown wide for their, misder and grim-visaged crime in its varied aspects, will you then make answer, "Am I my brother's Reeper?" You cannot close your eyes to the fact that more or less of all these results have followed the establishment of the saloon in your midst. If it is your signatures that established the saloon, are you not answerable? Voters, in the name of helpless women and children, debauched youths, rulned wrecks of manhood, I ask that you weigh your responsibility in this matter. Yours may be the single vote to make the one majority necessary that turns the scale and establishes the saloon. Temperance and Christian people are roused as never before to earnest and tireless effort, their work is meeting with phenomenal success all over Virginia, and the liquor seller need not hope that King William will be lax in reform, indifferent to high progress and legging in this great and noble work. The Issue is squarely made, the line of demarkation is plainly drawn. On the one side substantial public-spirited citizens, alive to the weal or wee of the Commonwealth, and carrying the influence of moral, social and financial standing—Christian people of, high character working in solid phalanx under the banner of Christ, and the great army of suffering women and callidren, innocent victims, appealing for rellef. On the other side is the liquor seller, working for gain at the expense of unutterable west to others, and getting in most cases it the dollar of the man or boy who can least afford to give it—the men who is the moral law that demands that questionable indulgence for the individual shall not be privileged at the expense of grievous hurt to a large majority. But, saddest of all, we see some of our thoughtlessly self-assertive youths, will you so rashly jeopardize your high and noble possibilities? The homes of the land appeal to you; fathers implore you; mothers on bended knees entreat you to come away from quaking ground, where many are plunge
